Councilman Panico said, "As a William Floyd graduate it makes me extremely proud to congratulate these three award winning teachers. Locally our schools are full of excellent educators who care deeply about educating our children."

The teachers were chosen for their dedication to providing the most innovative STEM education, commitment to professional growth and enthusiasm for sharing successful practices with their colleagues in their schools and district. Statewide, only 237 teachers were selected for the program in 2015.
