Farmingville, NY – On October 9, Councilwoman Connie Kepert attended the soft opening of Longwood Public Library’s newly renovated building. The building was designed based upon input sought during numerous community forums which were held to explore the future needs of the library, set goals for the project, and seek comments on the new building’s design. The renovations included adding about 15,000 square feet to the building, which includes a children’s library and new auditorium. The new library also includes the addition of energy-efficient solar panels and an upgraded heating and cooling system to help the building conserve energy and lower electricity bills.

“The Longwood Library opened its wonderful new facility to the public today and already there were children, seniors, and community members utilizing and enjoying this excellent new community resource,” said Councilwoman Connie Kepert. “Congratulations to the staff of the Longwood Public Library, its director Suzanne Johnson, and the whole community.”
