Farmingville, NY - On Sunday, May 15, the painting "Defining Moment" was presented to Brookhaven Town Supervisor Mark Lesko and Deputy Supervisor and Councilwoman Kathleen Walsh by Babylon Town Supervisor Steve Bellone. The presentation was made during an Armed Forces Day motorcycle rally to raise funds and awareness for victims of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. The painting by artist Anthony Marino is a portrait of Pfc. Joseph Dwyer from Mount Sinai, who enlisted in the Army two days after September 11, 2001. He served his country with honor and fought bravely in Iraq, only to return home with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. The effects of PTSD would eventually take his life on June 28, 2008. Chris Delany, the event organizer and personal friend of Pfc. Dwyer, along with the artist's nephew Jamie Scardoriato were also present at the event. The painting, which was recently on display at Babylon Town Hall will hang in the lobby of Brookhaven Town Hall for one year before it moves to another location.