Farmingville, NY - On Monday, May 14th, 2012, Brookhaven Supervisor Mark Lesko visited the global headquarters of ENECON Corporation, a technology company that specializes in advanced polymer composites. ENECON's polymer systems are used to attack erosion, corrosion, and chemical problems on pipes, valves, pumps, and more. ENECON has pioneered unique coating systems for the U.S. Navy and the Army Corps of Engineers, the Panama Canal, nuclear and fossil fuel power stations, pulp and paper mills, petrochemical plants, mining and quarrying operations, waste water systems, and food processing facilities.

"It is amazing that ENECON's technology is being developed and manufactured right here in Brookhaven. It was a pleasure visiting their Global Headquarters in Medford today. They run a great, clean facility and I look forward to them growing in Brookhaven," said Supervisor Mark Lesko.

ENECON CEO Andy Janczak said, "ENECON Corporation was delighted to welcome Supervisor Mark Lesko and his Brookhaven IDA Team to its international headquarters in Medford. ENECON's new corporate home was constructed about 3 years ago and the construction of its 26,000 square foot facility was made possible through the efforts of the Town of Brookhaven IDA. We were previously located in Bethpage, but we were looking for a new and larger corporate headquarters. Since we had another company in Pennsylvania and a few of our senior executives also live in Pennsylvania, we were very seriously considering a move off Long Island. We were persuaded by the Brookhaven IDA Team to consider a move to Medford - into the Empire Zone that had been created to assist manufacturers to relocate there. The folks at the Town of Brookhaven helped us make the entire construction and relocation process run smoothly and we are absolutely delighted with our decision to stay on Long Island. During the past 3 years we have continued to receive assistance from the IDA and we are extraordinarily grateful for their help."
