Ensuring that the Town of Brookhaven Highway Department and LIPA move resources and equipment to properly respond

In Setauket, Acting Supervisor Walsh and Councilman Fiore Rosenfeld inspect two downed utility poles blocking traffic on Old Town Road, just south of Route 25A in Setauket.

Farmingville, NY - On Wednesday, October 31, Acting Town Supervisor Kathleen Walsh and Councilman Steve Fiore Rosenfeld toured the communities of Stony Brook, Setauket, Old Field, Poquot, Strongs Neck and West Meadow Beach to survey and report on the damage that was caused by Hurricane Sandy. They met with a number of residents who reported down trees and power lines and power outages throughout the community. They also were called to check in on an elderly woman whose family hadn’t heard from since the storm began. The woman was found to be safe in her home.
Councilman Fiore Rosenfeld speaks with Judy Estes, Executive Director of the Three Village Historical Society, whose driveway was blocked by a fallen tree and power lines on Main Street in Old Stony Brook.

At West Meadow Beach, Councilman Fiore Rosenfeld inspects West Meadow Beach which experienced high tides, flooding and beach erosion during Hurricane Sandy. In the background are Commissioner of Public Safety Anthony Gallino and Acting supervisor Kathleen Walsh.
