Farmingville, NY - Town of Brookhaven Economic Development officials have set up programs to provide financial assistance and help in navigating disaster relief offerings for small businesses recovering from super storm Sandy. For more information about these programs, please call Town of Brookhaven Economic Development at (631) 451-6563.

“We are pleased to be able to assist those businesses impacted by Sandy. My hope is that those businesses in need will reach out to us and we will be able to get them connected with the services they need,” said Lisa Mulligan, Town of Brookhaven Director of Economic Development.

We would like to inform the public that representatives from the Small Business Administration (SBA) and the State’s Small Business Development Center (SBDC) will be on site at Town Hall in the Economic Development Division helping business owners with business loan applications and to process paperwork. They have been available since November 14, 2012 and will be until further notice. For more information about these programs, please call Town of Brookhaven Economic Development at (631) 451-6563.

Additionally, there will be One on One Disaster Assistance for Businesses made available through the SBA at Stony Brook SBDC. For additional information about the SBDC programs, please call (631) 632-9070.
