Coram, NY - Brookhaven Highway Superintendent Daniel P. Losquadro has kept his promise of improving the Department's fleet to better serve residents during times of severe weather and emergencies. The Highway Department has added ten new trucks to its fleet so far this year and by the end of this month that number will grow to sixteen. Included in that number are twelve heavy duty six wheel dump trucks and four pickup trucks. All of these vehicles will be used to address work year round and are also well equipped to deal with the upcoming snow season.

"Safety has been my top priority and by adding these trucks to the Department's fleet, it ensures that we have new snow removal equipment located throughout Brookhaven," Superintendent Losquadro said.

These trucks will be dispersed equally among crews which are responsible for covering four different regions within Brookhaven. The funding for the trucks will be allocated from money in the Highway Department's capital budget.

"By replacing older, exhausted trucks with new reliable vehicles it will help the Highway Department better serve Brookhaven Town's needs," Superintendent Losquadro said. "Residents can be confident these trucks will help to get the job done and not break down when they are needed most. Additionally, this will allow the Department to operate more efficiently as less time will be spent on fixing older vehicles and more time can be dedicated to addressing other needs."
