Farmingville, NY – With the Thanksgiving holiday quickly approaching, JVC Broadcasting and its roster of five radio stations is once again hosting their annual “Stuff-A-Truck” food drive to support Long Island Cares, Inc. – The Harry Chapin Food Bank and the Brookhaven INTERFACE Program. This year’s two day event will be held on Saturday, November 19th and Sunday, November 20th at the Café Figaro’s parking lot in the Walmart shopping center in Centerach from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

All five radio stations, including Party 105, My Country 96.1, La Fiesta 98.5, LI News Radio 103.9 and its newest station, Oldies 98.1, will battle each other to see who can collect the most donated food. At past “Stuff-A-Truck” events, JVC Broadcasting has been very successful in raising donations and is looking forward to continuing in this tradition this November.

Suggested food items for donations include all non-perishables including, but not limited to, canned soups, canned cranberry sauce, turkey gravy, stuffing mix, instant potatoes, canned sweet or white potatoes, rice, canned vegetables, jar or canned sauce, macaroni, canned fruit, puddings, jello, cookie mix, cake mix and icing and juice. Frozen turkeys will be accepted. Also, donations of $10 Gift Cards to local supermarkets will be accepted.

“There are many families that struggle every day to put food on the table,” said Supervisor Romaine. “This food drive not only helps those families, but it also reminds us about the true meaning of the holiday season. I ask everyone to give thanks for what they have and please open your hearts to those in need.”

“There are 316,000 people on Long Island that are food insecure,” said William Gonyou, Community Event and Food Drive Manager for Long Island Cares. “Among these 316,000 people, 89,000 are children. This event is a fun and creative way to help our neighbors and to bring attention to an issue that is a growing need.”
