Farmingville, NY - On Monday October 6, Councilwoman Connie Kepert held a community chat at Bretton Woods in Coram. During the event, Councilwoman Kepert discussed a number of projects and legislation that she sponsored, including the newly enacted carbon monoxide detector law that will help to protect residents from the deadly and silent killer.

The Councilwoman also spoke of the progress being made in preservation efforts such as the Carmans River Conservation and Management Plan and sustainable development, including the recent ground breaking for Wincoram, a mixed use commercial/residential project located at the former United Artist theater site in Coram. Finally, the Councilwoman outlined the Town's effort to preserve Coram's important history at both the Davis and Mott Houses.

Councilwoman Kepert was joined at the community chat by Assemblyman Edward Hennessey who discussed plans for improvements on Route 112, which will include new drainage, upgraded traffic signals and pedestrian facilities, and a shoulder bike lane.

"I am always happy to visit the residents of Bretton Woods and engage in conversation about the important issues facing the Coram community," said Councilwoman Kepert.
