Group looks to rebuild hunting shack destroyed during Hurricane Sandy

Farmingville, NY - When Hurricane Sandy hit Long Island in 2011, it changed the landscape of our south shore in a dramatic fashion, especially Bellport Bay. Sandy's fury brought the destruction of the Pattersquash Hunting Club's shack which has been an integral part of the Bellport community for over 50 years, and a proud symbol of the area's water fowling heritage. On August 14, Councilwoman Kepert (right) joined with club president Francis Miller (left) and dozens of members of the Pattersquash Hunting Club at the Bellport Country Club to raise the necessary funds to rebuild the shack.

"Bring Back the Shack is a great cause and it was pleasure to support the Pattersquash Gunners Association in this great endeavor," said Councilwoman Kepert.
