Farmingville, NY – On March 22, Councilwoman Valerie M. Cartright (left) honored the recipients of the Three Village Historical Society Awards during a ceremony and dinner held at the Old Field Club. Each year, the society presents the awards to recipients such as local homeowners and youth, members of local businesses and society members who have made significant contributions to preserving the shared heritage within the Three Village Area. The Councilwoman is pictured with Suffolk County Legislator Kara Hahn and the Three Village Historical Society President Stephen Healy.

"The work of the Three Village Historical Society is never-ending, and it is my pleasure to honor the individuals who contribute their time and talent to this effort," stated Councilwoman Cartright. "Their hands-on dedication to the community and appreciation for the history and tradition of the past is an important reason why so many cherish our district and Brookhaven Town," she added.

The Three Village Historical Society has been an informative resource on the area's history for residents and visitors, since its inception in the 1960s. It preserves and maintains the structures, culture and traditions in the Three Village community.
