Farmingville, NY - On June 30, Councilman Dan Panico (fourth from left) attended the Colonial Youth and Family Service's 36th Annual Golf Outing at Rock Hill Country Club in Manorville. During the event, the Councilman was honored for his service to the organization and the community. He was also presented with a proclamation from Suffolk County Legislator Kate Browning (fifth from left) for his work as a Brookhaven Town Councilman.

"Colonial Youth and Family Services has a longstanding commitment to the residents of the Mastic-Shirley community," said Councilman Panico. "The services that they provide help to improve the quality of life for so many families that are in need. I am honored to be recognized by this wonderful organization and I especially thank the volunteers who are the backbone of the organization."

Colonial Youth and Family Services, a charitable, tax exempt, 501(c)(3) agency, is dedicated to promoting the physical, emotional and social potential of youth and their family members. They endeavor to offer programs which provide healthy development through education, counseling, advocacy, training, prevention, volunteerism and support services
