Farmingville, NY – On December 2, Councilman Michael Loguercio (at podium) joined Supervisor Ed Romaine (second from right) at a Suffolk County Police Department (SCPD) press conference to announce that the Superstar Beer and Soda store in Coram has been closed by the County and Town. The business, located on Route 112, was the source of numerous complaints and was in violation of many Town building codes including Unsafe Structure, Unfit for Human Occupancy and Unlawful Structure. The property owner was also issued a Stop Work Order by the Town for failing to obtain a building permit, having an expired building permit and failing to comply with the provisions of the New York State Fire Prevention and Building Code. The store was cited by the SCPD for selling alcohol to

Supervisor Romaine said, "This store has been troublesome for a long time. Thanks to the work of Councilman Loguercio, the Chief Fire Marshal and the Town Law and Building departments, we've been able to finally close it down. I commend Commissioner Sini and the Suffolk County Police for their cooperation with the Town to rid Coram of this unscrupulous business."

Councilman Loguercio said, "It's a great day for the residents and businesses in Coram. The problems caused by this business spread out across the community and had a very negative affect on the quality of life for everyone. The Town's Law, Fire Prevention and Building departments along with the Suffolk County Police Department worked together to make this happen and I thank them for their efforts."
