Farmingville, NY - On Wednesday, July 13, Supervisor Mark Lesko, Councilman Dan Panico, Councilwoman Jane Bonner and Town Clerk Patricia Eddington joined hundreds of senior citizens who attended the Town of Brookhaven's Annual Senior Picnic at Southaven Park in Yaphank, hosted by the Town's Senior Citizen Division. Twenty-three

Town sponsored community senior groups participated in the event and enjoyed a number of activities, including dancing, raffles, cards, board games, good food and fun. Entertainment and music was provided by Louis Del Prete.

"Our senior picnic is one of the most enjoyable events of the year," said Supervisor Lesko. "It gives me the opportunity to stop by every table and speak with the residents about what's happening in the Town and their neighborhoods. They are a wonderful group of concerned citizens and I look forward to spending this time with them every year."

"I am always happy to attend the Town's Senior Picnic because I get to spend time talking with so many friends from all around Brookhaven," said Councilwoman Bonner. "This event means a great deal to the residents who get a chance to speak with their elected officials and they look forward to participating every year."

"It is always great to see so many people participate in our Senior Citizen events," commented Brookhaven Town Councilman Dan Panico. "By attending the picnic last week I had the opportunity to personally speak with and meet many seniors to address concerns and even get some helpful advice on how Brookhaven can work to meet the needs of our senior community."

"It's a real pleasure to spend the day with seniors from all over Brookhaven Town. They have given so much to our communities throughout the years. It is nice to be able to show our appreciation and gratitude to them. The staff, under the leadership of Valerie Biscardi, deserve our heartfelt thanks for hosting such a successful event," stated Brookhaven Town Clerk Patricia Eddington.
