Farmingville, NY - Councilman Dan Panico was on hand recently at William Floyd High School to honor members of the Colonial Youth Community Volunteer Corps who have reached significant milestones in the hours of community service they have completed doing a variety of tasks including community clean ups, graffiti removal, and participating in community events.

The Corps is part of the Colonial Youth and Family Services, an organization based in Mastic Beach that promotes the physical, emotional and social well being of youth under 21 and their family members.

"It's great to be given the opportunity to recognize these fine young people," said Councilman Panico, who presented certificates of appreciation to the honorees. "They should be extremely proud of achieving such important milestones and for helping make their community a better place to live."
