Farmingville, NY - On March 14, Councilwoman Valerie M. Cartright, joined Supervisor Edward Romaine, Legislator Kara Hahn, and Assemblyman Steven Englebright at the Boy Scouts Troop 354 Eagle Court of Honor ceremony held at the Port Jefferson Elks Lodge #2138.

Three of the Scouts completed projects at the Port Jefferson Station Save-A-Pet Animal Rescue and Adoption Center. Benjamin J. Granger built a mahogany picnic table encircling a tree in front of the center, Andrew J. McHugh built an outdoor exercise area for cats waiting to be adopted, and Kyle W. Schauss built winter housing and a feeding station for feral cats that are cared for by Save-A-Pet. Scout Harrison R. Granger completed a project at First United Methodist Church in which he replaced the light fixtures and painted walls in the meeting hall. All of the Scouts reside in Port Jefferson Station.

Supervisor Romaine said, "Boy Scouts are the future leaders of our country and from meeting these fine young men, I can say we will be in good hands. I commend them for their service to the community and congratulate each of them and their parents for a job well done."

"As always, it is a pleasure to attend an Eagle Court of Honor," commented Councilwoman Cartright. "It was an honor to shake the hands of these four young Scouts, each of whom made a contribution to our community with the completion of his Eagle Scout project."
