Farmingville, NY – On Saturday, October 17, Supervisor Ed Romaine (second from left) and the Town’s Assistant Waterways Management supervisor Tom Carrano from the Towns PELM Department (second from right) attended the eelgrass workshop at Bellport Village Marina. The workshop is a hands-on event where children of all ages learn the importance of eelgrass to our waterways. The group weaved shoots of eelgrass into burlap discs. Eelgrass has many ecological benefits which include stabilizing seafloor sediments and shorelines, cleaning coastal waters and providing habitat for a diversity of flora and fauna.
